Gas prices at costco ancaster

Ask Costco members what they love in the store, and you'll probably hear more than a few mentions of ultra-low gas prices. The promise of fillings at bargain prices is one of the biggest advantages of a Costco bond, which costs $60 a year. But does Costco really have the cheapest gas in America? Costco may not be Costco's cheapest gas station | Tim Boyle/Getty Images CSP magazine, a commercial publication for the convenience store and gas station industry, ranked low-priced gas leaders in 2018. Costco, who was number one in 2017, lost first place. Food 4 Less, which has 25 gas stations nationwide, had the cheapest gas in America. On average, a gallon of gasoline at its gas stations was 21.59 cents cheaper than at competing stations. Costco came in second. A gallon of gasoline was 21.19 cents cheaper on average. But you'll probably find it much easier to find a Costco to fill your tank. The big box store has about 450 gas stations around the U.S. – hundreds more than the Food 4 Less. Rounding out the top 10 cheap gas stations were Quik Stop, We Got It, ARCO, G&M Food Mart, Space Age, Fred Meyer, Rotten Robbie and Kwik Serve. How much does it cost to fill up at Costco? A gallon of regular unleaded cost an average of $2.85 on September 21, according to AAA. Average prices ranged from a high of $3.79 per gallon in Hawaii to a low of $2.52 in Alabama. Prices were generally higher on the West Coast and lower in the Southeast. Prices went up about 25 cents a gallon from a year ago. To get a say on how Costco prices are compared to local averages, we look at gasoline prices in several major U.S. cities using Gas Buddy. In Los Angeles, the average price of gasoline was $3.67 a gallon (as of September 21). Several Costco stores had gasoline for $3.25 a gallon, as did Sam's Club. Gasoline with similar prices was available at a handful of other stations, such as ARCO, where you don't need a fill-in. But at some gas stations in L.A., gasoline was $4.49 per gallon or more. In Chicago, gasoline was $3.14 a gallon. Costco and Sam's Club were the cheapest places to fill their tank in the metropolitan area, with prices ranging from $2.79 to $2.73 a gallon. In Atlanta, a gallon cost an average of $2.76. At Costco and Sam's Club, gasoline was $2.47, while BJ's had gasoline for $2.48 a gallon. Some stations have reported slightly lower prices than the adarer clubs. Some quiktrip, speedway and murphy usa stations had gasoline for $2.52 a gallon. Clearly, this is not scientific research. But a quick look at gasoline prices seems to suggest that Costco's prices are not only lower than average, but also generally one of the cheapest places to fill – although not be the cheapest. Should you switch to Costco for gasoline? A man pumps gasoline | Joe Raedle/Getty Images So, should you start stuffing exclusively at Costco? Maybe. If you drive a lot and have a Costco around, there is a good chance that it will save money. But you'll need to research gas prices in your local area and do the math to find out if the economy economy it's worth it. In high gas taxes in cities like Chicago, Costco may not offer a huge price advantage, the Christian Science Monitor noted. In addition, there are other ways to reduce your fuel costs. Supermarkets can offer discounts per gallon linked to their rewards programs, while cash credit card rewards can also help you save money. (It's worth noting: Costco's Anywhere Visa gives you 4% back on your first annual $7,000 gas purchases.) Also, keep an eye out for gas stations that give you a discount to pay cash and not with a credit or debit card. Finally, using an app like Gas Buddy can help you compare prices and see if Costco (or your rival Sam's Club) is really the cheapest game in town. Check out the cheat sheet on Facebook! Getty If you like to buy in bulk, Costco is basically paradise on Earth. But there's one small caveat: it's a member-only store that costs $55 a year to participate. While you'll probably earn your money back in all the savings you'll score, there's actually another way to get those deals. It turns out that some other stores are willing to match Costco's prices—which means you can skip the sign-up rate altogether. It works like this: As you don't have a party and therefore can't visit your local Costco to investigate your prices, costco.com is your best friend. Use it to search for how much items cost at the wholesale retailer, and once you find the item you want, print the product page at the price and take it to the store that participates in the price matching. So who participates? Check out Best Buy for Electronics, Home Depot and Lowe's for home improvement supplies, or contact Office Depot and Staples for office essentials. Even the other great member store, Sam's Club, will price matching (meaning you don't have to belong to both to make sure you're getting the best deal available). Kyle from Rather Be Shopping has compiled a complete list of the stores that will price Costco (check here) — and the stipulations that apply to each store. Yes, sometimes there are catches: For example, for Best Buy to approve a price match, there must be a Costco within 25 miles of your local Best Buy store. Of course, no shopping trick will totally replace the Costco experience. For example, bulk food and toiletries are much harder to find elsewhere than televisions or microwaves. (Not to mention the free sample day—a Costco adtake that's more fun than we'd like to admit.) But price matching is a useful tip to have in your back pocket when you have a specific purchase in mind.
